

ROBIN, WRECKER OF BANK, ASSAILS COUNSEL IN COURT

"Takes Nine Lawyers to Make Untruth Look Like Truth,"
He Says.

WISHES THEM DISBARRED

Is Himself Denounced Savagely by Barristers Whom He Attacks—Merely Smiles.

Joseph G. Robin, wrecker of the Northern Bank, made a dramatic appeal to the Justices of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court to-day in connection with charges he has brought against nine lawyers, looking to their disbarment.

Robin, dapper as a fashion plate, was taken to the Appellate Division by J. J. Salterich, a keeper in the Tombs Prison, on a writ of habeas corpus which he himself sued out.

The confounded bank wrecker sat within the counsel railing and calmly heard Anton McCook Beard, one of the attorneys he accuses of fraud, denounce him as a thief who had robbed the poor and committed one of the most serious crimes in the history of New York State.

"This man, who sits here," said Mr. Beard, "comes to pose as a friend of District Attorney Whitman, and he is doing so to build up a false public sympathy. He has been permitted to go free about this city, in the face of his crime, without legal license. He is here to-day before this court because the man who engineered this proceeding did not have the courage to come himself."

Anton G. Fox, who appeared with Beard in behalf of the defendants, bitterly assailed Robin, but the bank wrecker made no show of emotion until his time came to address the Court. Then he launched a tirade of abuse and denunciation against the accusing lawyers, which not only showed he was thoroughly familiar with his subject, but was capable of holding his own before a court of law as an experienced attorney.

HE MAKES SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST THE LAWYERS.

First he charged that the attorneys had been guilty of conduct unbecoming officers of the court, conspiring to defraud, grand larceny and aiding and abetting in the time of grand larceny, in that they induced the lower branch of the court to approve a claim of $15,000 made by the law firm of Gifford, Hobbs & Beard against the Northern Bank.

The attorneys against whom Robin directed his accusations were Philip Ashton Rollins and Alfred Adams Wanst of Rollins & Rollins; Roswell D. Nichols, Fulton J. Redmond, James M. Gifford, John D. Fearhake and Anton McCook Beard of Gifford, Hobbs & Beard; Charles A. Voetsch and Orion H. Cheney, former State Superintendent of Banks.

Robin denied he had had unlicensed freedom about town since he pleaded guilty to larceny in connection with the failure of the Northern Bank. He told the Justices he appeared before them as one who was interested in the assets of the Northern Bank, and that his sole object was to preserve the assets of the bank.

"I am no lawyer," declared Robin, "but with the help of my God and my conscience I have prepared the papers in this proceeding from the records in the case of the Northern Bank. It doesn't take much of a lawyer to tell the truth, but it takes nine lawyers to make an untruth look like the truth."

Robin submitted a lengthy affidavit in which he alleged specifically that the conduct of the lawyers in preparing, swearing to, acquiescing in, serving and submitting to the Court certain papers, for the purpose of inducing the Court to order the payment of the $15,000 to Gifford, Hobbs & Beard as a preferred claim, constituted a crime under the code for which they should be punished.

ROBIN SAYS CHENEY'S LAW- YERS TOLD LIES.

The reason given by the attorneys to the lower court for making the Gifford, Hobbs & Beard claim a preferred one, according to Robin, was to enable Cheney, then the State Superintendent of Banks, to get possession of the papers involved in the litigation of the Northern Bank.

"And when they made these representations to the court," continued Robin, "Cheney's lawyers had the very papers in their possession and had had them for two months previously. Their statements to the contrary were deliberate lies and were known to them to be so."

Both Fox and Beard referred to the proceeding to-day as "infamous." They said Robin was present when Ernest C. Hall, as referee, took testimony as to the correctness of the Gifford, Hobbs & Beard claim. Hall reported to the lower court in favor of the payment, but at the time Robin raised no objection.

"It does not now contest the propriety of the claim," said Beard. "The Justices of the Appellate Division took the case under advisement without comment."

Robin and Keeper Salterich walked back to the Tombs from the Court.

Public Service Approves Subway Routes.

The Board of Estimate today concurred in the action taken recently by the Public Service Commission in approving eight additional rapid transit routes to be included in the proposed dual system. At the same time the board set June 1 as the date for a public hearing on the route by which it is proposed to connect the proposed Bay-enth avenue subway with the Interborough present tube at the Borough Hall, Brooklyn.

Honeymoon Horoscopes

By Nicola Greeley-Smith
Good Nerves the Real Foundation of the Ideal Husband and Wife—With These the Other Qualities Needed for Happiness Can Be Cultivated.

THE FAVORITE PASTIME OF HUSBAND AND WIFE

Last of the Series.

Barring physical and mental deficiencies, there is no reason why any young fellow should not develop qualities of the ideal husband, nor why his wife should not grow into the likeness of his feminine ideal. I class among mental deficiencies the constitutional liar, male and female.

The woman who is married to a man with no regard for the truth need not hope that his imaginative flights will diminish with years and wisdom. Lying is a form of mental disease. But comparatively few men are liars if they dare not to be. One of the qualifications of the ideal wife is that her husband shall feel always that he can afford to be truthful, that tears, scenes and tantrums are not the fearful and inevitable reward of conjugal candor.

The ideal husband is truthful because he does not feel that eternal prevarication is the price of young women's regard. Not long ago six young women gathered about a tea table were asked to write on a slip of paper the supreme quality of the ideal husband. When the six slips were read the little group were astounded to realize that all contained the same word, "Truthfulness."

Fear, not the devil, is the father of lies; fear of the electric disturbance that so many women enjoy and from which the bravest man cowers. Give any man, save the constitutional liar, a real chance to tell the truth and he will prefer to do so.

For truth telling is as expedient as it is moral. Not many persons have the juggling faculty of keeping half a dozen lies in the air at once, and that is what the successful liar has to do.

AVERAGE LIAR IS TRAPPED BY HIS OWN TALES.

The average liar is the victim of his own lies, much more a victim than the persons to whom he relates them. Like Gulliver waking on the coast of Lilliput, he finds himself pinned to the earth by every hair, supine under the combined compulsion of a million Lilliputian lies.

The foundation for the ideal husband or wife is good nerves. A home in which either wife or husband is not thoroughly the captain his nerves cannot be happy. For when the nerves mutiny, peace runs away.

With the essential foundation of good nerves, there are, in my opinion, the qualities of the ideal husband: Poise, Endurance, Honesty, Reserve, Justice and Tenderness.

Most men strive to be generous to women, but few are just, partly, of course, because the average woman does not want justice. She prefers the role of babydoll with a husband shaking a rattle in front of her high chair or calling her attention to the "birds."

Tenderness is a rare quality among men because of the tradition that it belongs properly to women and that an expression of serious feeling is unmanly.

The modern man is emotionally self-conscious. He is ashamed to be devoted in a real feeling, especially by his wife. His rare expression of love is invariably followed by a jest or a sneer. Yet in a husband a sense of tenderness is really more important than a sense of humor.

BERRY BOY CUTS CANDY BOY IN A FIGHT OVER SWEETS.

One Lad in Children's Court, Other in Hospital After Knife Is Used in Scrap.

Abrite Graconio was tired of strawberries. He wanted candies for a change and as many of them as he had of berries. Abrite is thirteen and sells fruit from a truck, so berries are piling on him just now.

As a result of his alleged longing for molasses peppermint, Abrite was arraigned in Children's Court to-day and William Georgavolas is in Harlem Hospital with two nasty stab wounds in the abdomen. He will recover.

William is fifteen and last night was in charge of a candy store at No. 212 Third avenue, two doors from his home. He says Abrite, who lives at No. 419 East One Hundred and Fifteenth street and had been selling strawberries at the corner of One Hundred and Sixteenth street, came into the store and said, "I want that box of candy."

Georgavolas told the police that as he reached for the box of candy Abrite hit him on the side of the head. Then there was a fight and he says Abrite drew a penknife and stabbed him. William was found by Patrolman Johnson on the floor, but he had saved the box of candy. Abrite had fled, but Detective Lagorenne arrested him later.

Perhaps these are the qualities of the ideal wife, remembering, of course, our common foundation of good nerves: Simplicity, Taste, Common Sense, Unselfishness, Sincerity, Consideration and Humor.

But why should a young man spend his dreams in building the character of his ideal woman? Why should the young husband seek to mould his mate in the image and likeness of his ideal wife? Why should the wife give so much thought to her husband's character? In other words, why should not each build an ideal self before tackling the other fellow?

Perhaps they are like children playing blocks, each wanting to build the other's house instead of rearing the best of character with the material immediately at hand, themselves.

Yet, if women would strive to build themselves into ideal wives, men dedicate their thoughts to the development of their own characters, all honeymoon horoscopes would have the same ending—"And they lived happily ever after."

BELLE OF PARIS BALL RIDES IN ON ELEPHANT; OTHERS IN GOLD CAGES

Arabian Nights Had Nothing
on Countess de Chabrilan's Startling Function.

PARIS, May 31.—Even in Paris there never before was anything like it, and that's why everybody is to-day still talking about the gorgeous Eastern Ball given by Countess Aynard de Chabrilan at her beautiful mansion, No. 8 Rue Christophe-Colomb, on Wednesday night.

It was the most magnificent Oriental fête Paris has seen. There is nothing in the Arabian Nights that had anything on it.

It exceeded the most golden dreams of the opium smoker, and would have startled the phantasmagoric brain of a thirty-third degree lotus eater.

The hostess presided in a splendid Persian costume of green and gold, an immense white osprey surmounting her hair. Almost every prominent person in Paris was there, all in Oriental costume that dazzled in richness of coloring and material, and in jewels. As the guests entered the opium tent in the courtyard they were announced with all the ceremonial of a high court function.

Princess d'Arenberg, who was on an elephant, rich in Indian trappings, made the most striking entrance. Following her were the Duchesse de Clermont-Tonnerre and Countess Stanislas de Castellane in gold cages, carried by cool black Africans. They were in golden wrappings, hair in Egyptian style, held by jeweled bands, and danced quaint steps. Pharaoh and slaves accompanied the Marquise de Brantes in a flower strewn Egyptian litter.

Many came in golden cages dressed as birds of brilliant plumage, while others came as a troupe of gypsies. The guests included hundreds of foreigners now in Paris.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS ON AN AIRSHIP MUST BE "ENTERED IN LOG"

PARIS, May 31.—The second international congress for the purpose of framing aviation laws has adopted the following resolution:

"In the event of a birth or a death occurring on an aircraft, the pilot must enter the event in a logbook and notify the authorities at the first place where he descends."

BLIND, BUT STILL AT WORK, GEN. BOOTH IS COMING HERE.

Salvation Army Founder After Hearing Verdict of Surgeons Plans Long Tour.

LONDON, May 31.—Gen. William Booth, the venerable head of the Salvation Army, although declared hopelessly blind by the surgeons who performed the recent operation to restore his sight, is cheerful and already arranging another tour of this country, after which he expects to visit the United States and Canada.

LIFE PRISONER, MAN OF MYSTERY, A SUICIDE IN CELL

"John Doe," Who Kept Identity and Past Secret, Was Held in Solitary Confinement.

CONCORD, N. H., May 31.—A mysterious life prisoner at the New Hampshire State prison, known as John Doe, no reliable information ever having been secured as to his full name or past history, committed suicide in his cell early to-day by hanging himself to a grating with a rope made from his mattress.

On Feb. 13, 1909, Doe and an accomplice, Joseph Gouin, a French-Canadian, after robbing a safe in Dover, boarded the St. John-Boston train at Rockingham Junction and killed a passenger in the smoking car. Both were captured after an exciting chase and on May 13 were sentenced to prison. Doe for life and Gouin for thirty years.

Gouin was transferred to the State Hospital as an insane person, and on April 22 escaped from that institution and is still at large.

On Nov. 11, 1910, Doe secured a knife and ran amuck at the prison, seriously wounding the physician, Dr. A. F. Gillingham, and the deputy warden, Frank D. Bailey. Since that time he had been in solitary confinement, being regarded as the most dangerous man ever in custody in the New Hampshire State prison.

FOUR RIDES FOR A NICKEL BY NEW TRANSFER SYSTEM.

Beginning To-morrow, New Arrangement Will Go Into Effect and End Transfer Troubles.

Beginning to-morrow a new transfer system will be inaugurated by the New York Railways Company, which will obviate all the transfer troubles of the past and allow a passenger, if necessary, to ride on four different lines for one fare. The new transfer is in the form of a three-coupon ticket.

After paying his fare and receiving a transfer the passenger will find that the right hand coupon gives a list of all the cross-town lines on which he is entitled to ride. On the left hand side of the transfer are printed the names of all the avenue lines of the system. The conductor of the avenue line removes the left hand coupon. This makes the passenger's third ride. Should he wish to transfer again, he presents the main portion of the coupon, which has printed upon it the names of the lines on which the passenger is entitled to ride.

DEAD WIFE'S BAUBLES NOT FOR SPOUSE NO. 2

Court Decides That Sparklers Really Belong to the Children.

Three diamond rings, valued at $500, which used to sparkle on the fingers of Mrs. Ida J. Robinson, wife of Benjamin Robinson, a Brooklyn wholesale butter and egg dealer, will sparkle there no more, because a City Court jury decided that the rings had belonged to Mrs. Robinson's predecessor, Mrs. Jennie Robinson, deceased.

The present Mrs. Robinson was a widow when Mr. Robinson wooed and won her in 1898. They were married in May and were happy at twelve months, but last fall began to quarrel. Mr. Robinson, during a heated discussion, accused the diamond rings as contraband of war or something of that sort.

Mrs. Robinson retaliated with a suit for separation, which she won. In the meantime she sued for the three rings, declaring one was her engagement ring and the other two wedding presents from Mr. Robinson.

Mr. Robinson set up as his defense that the rings had been bequeathed to his children by their dead mother and that when he brought a stepmother into the house she asked permission to wear them.
